GINSENG.

The plant that is worth its weight in money, holding the same relation to success and eventually to great wealth, as did Burley tobacco to the blue grass regions of Kentucky. Each sang garden becomes not only a source of supply but an example of success. True, the cultivator must wait quite a time for the harvest—say three or four years after the process of seed bearing commences when he can, at his option, close the deal, dig up his accumulations, collect his earnings or, if wiser, he may sit in the shade taking his ease and let the gold bearing root grow on, each year yielding its wealth of seed, which as the industry becomes more and more important, can be disposed of to a later cultivator at advanced prices. Comparatively few people know the value of Ginseng seed or know that the best quality of roots are grown direct from them. Roots grown direct from seed are more whole and solid and are, therefore, worth more in the market. The Ginseng industry is no longer in its infancy; it is now known that the plant is of as easy culture as any field or garden plant. Just why the plant should have so long been neglected I am unable to say. It is true, though not generally known, that it has acquired through neglect, two bad habits, the habit of growing in the shade only and producing seed that require 18 months for germination. So far I have seen nothing from the pen of any cultivator intended to correct these habits. They seem to content themselves with the profits sure to be derived. They go on letting "well enough alone," generally advising the novice to cultivate the plant under the shade. GEO. M. STATON.

CURES WITHOUT STOMACH DOSING.

Hyomei Cures Catarrh by Simple Breathing. Penny refunds Money if it Fails to Cure.

A long stride toward solving the mystery of curing catarrh was taken with the discovery of Hyomei. In fact, the percentage of cures by this treatment proves it equal to the final tests.

The folly of taking medicine into the stomach to cure catarrh of the nose, throat and lungs, has been realized by physicians, but not until Hyomei was known, had they a practical method that would obviate stomach drugging.

A complete Hyomei outfit costs but $1, and consists of a neat pocket inhaler that can be used anywhere without attracting attention, a medicine dropper and a bottle of Hyomei.

Breathing Hyomei through the inhaler, every particle of air that enters the nose, throat and lungs, is charged with a healing balsam that soothes and allays all irritation, kills the catarrhal germs and enriches the blood with additional ozone.

Mr. Penny has so much faith in the power of Hyomei to cure catarrh that he is selling it under a personal guarantee to refund the money if it does not give positive relief.
